AI SYNTHETIC INTIMACY

This book is not about the future. It is about the present.

Artificial intelligence has already transformed desire, sex, and human companionship. Today, millions of people around the world interact with images created by algorithms instead of with other human beings. This is not a trend. It is a new way of living.

The central figure of this book is something of today and of what is coming: a holographic lamp. From the ceiling of a room, it projects hyper-realistic human figures—customizable, obedient, and available at all times.

This book analyzes that process. It reveals how the human body is no longer necessary to produce visual desire. It explains why the market is replacing real actors with AI-generated images. It shows how the human bond is quietly disappearing, replaced by a simulation that never says no, that is always ready, that demands nothing. And for that very reason, it is winning.

Desire, intimacy, and affection no longer depend on another person. They depend on an interface, on a voice command, on a monthly subscription. And the holographic lamp is not science fiction: it is the final product of a technological chain already in motion and soon to be in millions of homes.

This book simply describes, step by step, how artificial intelligence is redefining what it means to be human in one of its most intimate and fundamental aspects. And why, if one does not understand what is happening, it is very easy to become trapped in a projected reality, believing one is still living in the real one.

It is not a prediction. It is what is already happening.

TABLE OF CONTENTS (9)

THE END OF THE HUMAN ACTOR (1)

Analysis of the replacement of the real body in the industrial production of desire.

PROJECTED SEX (2)

Argument on the technological evolution from the flat screen to holographic projection.

PROGRAMMED DESIRE (3)

Argument on the transformation of fantasy into a customizable and unlimited product.

THE DEATH OF THE BOND (4)

Analysis of the annulment of reciprocity and conflict in desire mediated by AI.

THE LOGIC OF THE MARKET (5)

Examination of the economic forces accelerating the adoption of artificial content.

ARTIFICIAL COMPANY (6)

Examination of simulation as a response to the epidemic of loneliness and social isolation.

THE MIRROR AT HOME (7)

Argument on the impact of holographic technology on the family and domestic structure.

THE CONTAINER OF DARK DEVIATIONS (8)

Analysis of the use of simulation as a tool for managing antisocial behaviors.

DIVIDED REALITY (9)

Examination of the coexistence of a physical society and a new imaginary society.

Sample – Capítulo 1: THE END OF THE HUMAN ACTOR (1)

For decades, the human body was the central and irreplaceable element of visual desire. It was filmed endlessly, edited to alter it, and sold as a product. That was a fundamental constant. The Human is becoming unnecessary for the production of the image of desire. Visual generation tools powered by artificial intelligence no longer depend on actors standing in front of a camera, nor on film crews, nor on recording studios.

AI-generated pornography is not a future promise; it is an operational reality. And it works. Not because of—or not only because of—its growing technical quality, but because it fulfills, or promises to fulfill, exactly what the user wants to see. It does so without the limits imposed by physical reality, without the need for negotiation with another person, without the fatigue or refusal of a human body, and without the awareness of interacting with another Human.

To understand the magnitude of this change, it is necessary to examine the previous situation. Before, to create any type of pornographic content, a human body had to perform. A real person had to physically expose themselves, move in a certain way, be recorded, repeat scenes, and sign contracts. There was a cost. A physical cost, often an emotional cost, and always, inevitably, a human cost. Even in its most industrialized and automated form, traditional pornography still required, as a basic element, a real body in front of the camera.

CATEGORY: SYMBOLIC

SYMBOLIC SHIFT: FROM BODY TO IMAGE

Symbol	Traditional Meaning	AI-era Meaning	Symbolic Shift
Human Body	Center of desire, physical proof of attraction.	Optional element, replaceable by synthetic image.	Body loses central role in erotic symbolism.
Actor's Consent	Boundary between desire and exploitation.	No longer needed; image generated without agency.	Consent becomes irrelevant in production.
Imperfection	Marker of authenticity and reality.	Programmable flaw or eliminated entirely.	Perfection replaces authenticity as the valued trait.

DESIRE AS A SUBSCRIPTION

Symbol	Past Model	AI Model	Symbolic Impact
Gift of Desire	Built through courtship, effort, interaction.	Delivered instantly via monthly plan.	Desire becomes a consumable service, not an earned bond.
Waiting	Anticipation as part of attraction.	Eliminated; on-demand access.	Removes symbolic value of patience in intimacy.
Ownership	Limited to what can be physically achieved.	Unlimited customization within code.	Shifts value from shared to solitary creation.
